The Partnership for Transforming Health Services (PATHS2) project is a 6-year national program funded by the UK's Department for International Development (DFID) to lead health systems strengthening efforts in Nigeria.

The PATHS2 project has developed a service delivery strategy which seeks to work with the State Ministry of Health (SMOH) and other partners to support amongst other interventions, limited infrastructural upgrades that include the provision of potable water to selected health facilities that will enable them meet the minimum quality standard for infrastructure.
